THE OLD SONGS

Echoing and reechoing down the corridors of time come the old and familiar strains of some of the old songs, which have registered their melody in the souls of men, which will last for all time. It may be the melody of that "Rock-a-Bye Lullaby" which made its impression on the mind of its children at a period when their young lives were susceptible and soothed by this song of the nursery. It may be the hymn which we have heard our father or mother sing, as the twilight shades began to gather, when "tired day" with all its activities was released from duty by the gatherings of the shades of night.

It may be just a song of childhood, when young life bubbled over with pleasure and anticipation, and never a care or burden was placed upon the mind or shoulder of the child. It may be the hymn at the old church; hallowed by the association of other days, when simplicity and seriousness were the guiding and restraining influences which were industriously pursued by her people.

How often it is the case that the familiar lines of some of these old songs reach the ear like, "When through the deep waters", comes from the trembling lips of one of the old saints, giving the impression of a preparedness, and awaiting the final summons. "The old brown homestead rears its walls" This is one of the songs heard by the children of 50 years ago and later, and mother was singing it. It, no doubt, carried her back to the home of her childhood, as it now does one of later life. "O don't you remember sweet Alice, Ben Bolt", one of those tender and touching melodies which have survived the years and wrecks of time, and today portray a tenderness and melody which few of the present ones do. And again there is one which will never die as long as sentiment and love control the emotions. "We have wandered today by the hill Maggie". And then as if by a wonderful climax, all are for shadowed by the song that in all climes, under all suns; among all people of any tongue, the strains of "Home Sweet Home," finds a responsive chord in the breast of every individual. This is a song which by common consent at once lends enchantment, and whenever heard, its tender melody and sentiment wreaths garlands around never to be forgotten scenes, and holds the listener entranced by the magic of its power.

WHEN LOVE SHINES IN

What a wonderful faculty is love. It can surmount seemingly unsurmountable obstacles; it climbs to the rugged heights when the object of its affection is there, and under all circumstances, in all climes, under all skies, and among all races of people it is the same, taking chances it seems when there are none, and tarries long after those who are unconcerned, have left. It has been the subject of the most beautiful thoughts in song and in story, and stands today as the one thing undefined in a world where rancor and hatred abide. Fortunes have been unselfishly poured out; great distances have been negotiated; dangers have been braved; old age has gone tottering down the lane of life, holding an outstretched hand to the object of its devotion, when the last vestige of hope has fled, and when everything else has recoiled and taken to paths which are more pleasant, love abides to the last; hoping all things, believing all things.

This faculty is seen daily in all of the lower animals, and there can be seen much of the same composition along this line as practiced by humankind. Who has not seen a bird with that plaintive note, pouring out its love song to its young, as if to give the assurance that no harm could come, because there was one with a heart full of love close by. The love of a dog for its master affords the most striking illustration perhaps, of any of the animal creation. It matters not in what circumstances its master might be; however how hard his lot; however scanty the daily food; and however unpretentious the hovel or place where the twain abide, there is nothing absolutely which can cause this animal, with much the same devotion akin to the human family, to desert his master or turn his back upon him. He asks no greater privilege than to be allowed to lie at the feet of his master, there to watch every move, and catch every word, responding with an intelligence which has never been fully appreciated. Love is supreme. It is love which must at last guide a disrupted world back to the paths of pleasantness and peace.

THOROUGHBREDS

The quality of a man is told by his behavior in adversity. "The word gentleman", said Sir Richard Steele, "ought not to be applied to a man's circumstances, but to his behavior in them." The true gentleman is strong to endure; and the real meaning of "social inferior" is illustrated by the man who quits cold, who gives out or gives up when the game goes against him.

It is excessively tiresome to have people dictate upon their remote ancestry, as though the distinction won by those who performed well in a distant day makes up for the failure of today's descendants to do anything or be something on their own account.

Honor won by proxy is no good. You cannot send another man to battle in your place and confiscate the credit due him for his valor and his constancy. The prize-winner is not the one that claims it, but the one that earns it. And the man of character wants nothing that he has not earned in his own name.

He is diffident about claiming the credit; it is the deed that matters, not the renown that comes after it. He does not demand that you shall sit and listen to his recital of his exploits. It is hard to draw his story from him. If you do succeed in extracting the tale, you will hear much of other actors; it will not seem as if he were the sole performer on the scene.

Good breeding is shown not in the exhibition of lineage and not in self-exploitation, but in fortitude, a courage revealed in straight forward every day. The opportunity to win a hero-medal and to stand on a public platform and the decorated with congratulations comes rarely and to few; but the chance to be brave in the simple, every day contacts of life comes to every one of us, and constantly.

The cynic would have us believe that the virtuous are exceptional and that acts of selfish generosity are phenomenal; we have only to look about us to know that the cynic is wrong and that in countless humble lives are shining examples of essential nobleness. A "common" man who cannot trace his family to a peerage conferred by William the Conqueror rises in his place and performs handsomely and puts to shame the other who says he is a patrician and for that cause demands homage. You will be judged by your age and your community for nothing but the man you are. You qualify not as the great-grandson of somebody, but for yourself. Our American aristocracy is that of industry; and he who fails not, on the belief that labor is degrading, may style himself a "gentleman," but in the regard of sensible folk he deserves to be rated with the tramp.—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

When congress pays strict attention to the big things of the nation, turning all their attention to the settling of them in the interest of the people whom they serve, then can the country be said to be in a healthy condition, and can feel a certain security from the attacks within and without. No other policy is worth considering, and certain it is that no other policy will make history for them which will be treasured up in the minds of their constituency, which will endure with the years.

There is entirely too much straining at knats and swallowing camels, in the disposition of the nation's business. Why take a year to arrive at a conclusion whether Henry Ford is to have the Muscle Shoals property or not? Why months of debate on whether the returned soldiers are entitled to a bonus for fighting the World War? Why debate day after day on a tariff law which puts money in the pockets of a favored at the expense of the many, and which would add to the cost of the necessities of life, making the burden already unbearable, greater still? Why appoint investigating committees, and appropriate thousands of dollars annually to pay the expense of them, only in the end simply to apply a coat of white-wash, and declare their labors ended? Why write into the national law of the land a provision making it unlawful for candidates for high government offices to spend more than a stipulated amount in the campaign for the office, only to condone the deed when it is done, and seat the one thus elected in high councils of the government? These are some of the things which the ones composing the "common herd" are wondering about, and this anxiety will continue until such a time when some consideration is given in a pointed way in behalf of the things they are vitally interested in.

Work on the Bee Line highway from the Cullman county line North, has progressed to a point just south of Lacon, to what is known as the mountain part of the roadway. It will require perhaps a month longer to make the grade on the mountain, it requiring the removal of large quantities of earth to get the grade down to required specifications.

The bridge across Flint Creek just North of Lacon is progressing slowly owing to considerable complications in the work. The foundations have already been poured, and now the work will progress considerably faster than in the past. Work of putting the rock on the part already graded, began Monday morning.

At Robinson creek south of Falkville, the work of constructing the approaches for a bridge at that point, are well under way. With this bridge completed, and the one cross Flint creek near Lacon, together with the high embankment which is being made through the creek bottom, it will be possible to cross this way at all seasons of the year.

The passage by the republican party quite recently of the Fordney-McCumber tariff bill, wrote into the law of the land another nauseating measure which will not add one whit to the popularity of the g. o. p. Its provisions are indefensible, according to some of the members of this party of protective tariff, yet, when the time came to vote they cast their future political history with the party which will again go down in defeat, according to all signs, at the next national election.

The tariff bill as passed panders into the hands of a few wool growers, representing according to statistic less than 2 per cent of the wool growers of the nation, who raise wool on a commercial basis. Yet, every man who wears clothes must pay tribute to the wool which enters into the fabric, estimated from $7.00 to $10.00 a garment.

Any reform, either from a national, statewide or county standpoint, must depend for its permanency upon the O. K. of the public conscience. As long as the ballot is the weapon of the people they can undo any law written on the national, state or county statute books. That is democracy, and

NEW FALL HATS HAVE ARRIVED

PIRTLE-ELLNER

The St. Paul's Southern Church was never more beautifully decorated than last evening when Mr. John Chomi Pirtle and Miss Theresa Elizabeth Ellner were joined in the holy bonds of wedlock by the Rev. J. H. Heiserman. At the appointed hour, Miss Alma Hauk played the accompaniment while Misses Louise Holtman and Marguerite Papenburg sang "Because You Are Mine, Sweetheart."

As the last notes were sung the gifted organist drifted into Mendelsohn's wedding march and the bridal party made down the aisle led by the ushers Messrs. Robert Nebrig, Milton Thorton, Edward Norwood and Louis Nebrig.

The bride was unusually attractive in her wedding gown of canton crepe trimmed in seed pearls. Her bride's veil was fastened into a crown which was worn by her mother forty years ago, and her only ornaments were a string of pearls and her engagement ring, gifts of the groom. The maid of honor, Miss Marie Pappenberg, attired in a girlish frock of pink organdy with rosebuds and lace trimmings. They were met at the altar beneath the wedding bell of pink and white roses suspended from a beautiful arch of roses and smilax, by the groom and his best man, Roger Beathany and there the ring ceremony was used.

The happy bridal party repaired to the home of the bride and there an informal reception was held. This popular couple were the recipients of many handsome gifts. After the congratulations an ice course was served.

COTTON MARKET
(By International News Service.)

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—Cotton was weak under pressure at the start today, growing out of the less favorable strike news and poor cables. New Orleans and Wall street bought on the decline. At the end of the first 15 minutes the market was steadier with prices about five to six points above the opening levels.

Romance of Paper.
When our forefathers were cavemen the Chinese were reading books printed on paper fashioned from the bark of the mulberry tree or of bamboo sprouts. The Moors introduced paper in the Twelfth century into Spain.

Satisfaction.
The man who does his best may not always win but he has the satisfaction of knowing that he wasn't defeated because of his own carelessness.

Lights of Varying Values.
According to an English scientist, candles and oil and gas lamps transform only 2 per cent of energy into light. Incandescent electric lamps 3 per cent, arc lights 10 per cent, and the magnesium light, 15 per cent.

When Ladies Wear Masks.
Ladies of quality originally wore masks either to protect their complexions from the burning sun or out of modesty to prevent them from being recognized while out of doors.

Overcrowded Room.
A room that is overcrowded and hung with heavy draperies is bad for health. A bedroom should have plenty of windows and they should be kept open during the night.

Jud Tunkins.
Jud Tunkins says he knows men who talk about whether they'd rather possess money or brains when they haven't a chance for either.

Black Sox Defeat The Pulaski Giants

A fast and snappy game of baseball was played at the Y. M. C. A. park Wednesday evening between the Decatur Black Box and the Pulaski Giants. Both teams were on edge, and gave the fans who witnessed the game an exhibition of the national sport, full of thrills and spectacular plays from the initial to the final inning. Honors were even up to the first half of the 4th inning, when the locals were able to put two runners over the rubber. Two innings later the visitors scored once.

The remaining innings was a pitcher's battle, with three up and three down in rapid succession. A large number witnessed the game and there was not a dull moment in it.

POLLY AND HER PALS

ADVICE TO GIRLS

By ANNIE LAURIE

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE: I am a girl 19 years old. I have finished school.

Though I am considered good-looking, yet I have no friends. This seems to be because I am very proper. I never permit any one to kiss me, as I do not consider it proper.

My girl friends have told me to do it, but I really don't do it.

How can I gain true friends? I am sure I would enjoy a nice young man company very much.

ONESOME LOUISE.

ONESOME LOUISE: Maintain your dignified attitude, my dear. Everybody is not as lax in the proprieties as you are.

Refuse to allow jealous thoughts to enter your mind. Love your husband, have faith in him, and keep cheerful, and I am sure you will soon see him as he was.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE: I am a young man 22 years old. I would like your advice on a question of vital importance.

I am in love with two girls. I would like to get married, but don't know which one to take.

Both of these girls love me dearly, but I care little more for one than I do for the other. At one time I was engaged to one of these girls, but broke the engagement on account of the other girl. I would like to hear your opinion. TROUBLED DICK.

TROUBLED DICK: Do not think of getting married, Dick, until you know your own mind. You are not in love with either of these girls, when you tell me you love them both, because you cannot be in love with two persons at the same time.

Wait until you really fall in love. Then you will have no trouble in deciding.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE: I am a young married woman, and

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—Funding of the $4,135,000,000 war debt owed by Great Britain to the United States was declared today by Secretary Mellon to have no relation to war loans made by the United States and Great Britain to other governments or questions arising in connection with reparations payments.

ALTOONA, Pa., Aug. 24.—Union leaders today were notifying their 45,000 miners in Central Pennsylvania to return to their posts they left five months ago, while the operators were rushing plans for a production of 35,000,000 tons of coal this year. RICHMOND, Aug. 24.—Officials of the Chesapeake and Ohio today announced the road is planning the expenditure of $16,500,000 in the next four years for extending the terminal facilities at Hampton Roads.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—Resignation of Representative Volstead, because of the help alleged to have been given him in his campaign by the Anti-Saloon League was requested in a resolution read to the house today by Tinkham. The motion was tabled.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Aug. 24.—Three branch laboratories will be opened by the state health department at once as a result of an appropriation for such work which has been made by the international health board. Dr. S. W. Welch, state health officer, today announced that branch laboratories will be established in Mobile and Birmingham and the third will be located in the Tennessee valley at a point yet to be determined.

Each city will be required to furnish housing facilities for the laboratory. The personnel will be appointed by Dr. L. C. Haden, director of the state laboratory. The branch laboratories will co-operate with the municipal laboratories in all laboratory work and in the diagnosis and control of communicable diseases. Anti-rabic treatment will still be sent out from the state laboratory here.

Poaching consists of cooking meats or any food on top of boiling water. Steaming is cooking by vapor or cooking in a perforated receptacle over a pot of boiling water. A marinade is simply a good pickling liquid—onion, vinegar, pepper, salt, garlic and spices, usually in which food may be marinated for any desired length of time. Pot roasts are often marinated for several hours before being cooked.

Braising, sometimes spoken of as grilling, is cooking by direct heat from the flame brought almost in contact with the food. The juices are retained by frequent turning of the broiler.

Stewing, or cooking slowly with a small quantity of liquid in a covered vessel, is a good method of cooking coarser portions of meat. When the liquid boils, set the pot back where it will simmer gently until the meat is done.

The flesh of pork should be a delicate, pinky white, and close-grained. The meat taints quickly, and should not be kept many hours before cooking.

In cooking, allow twenty minutes to a pound for roasting pieces.

Ham requires from four to six hours, bone in.

If the ham is very salty, boil a turnip in the water, and it will draw off some of the salt.

Turkeys should be young, plump and white-fleshed, with legs firm and round, necks long and feet supple.

VIRGINIA TOBACCO
POLITICS WARM UP IN TWIN CITIES

Politics municipally is beginning to assert itself in the Twin Cities, two candidates having already announced for the office of mayor of Decatur, and are conducting a spirited campaign, they being the present Mayor James Nelson, and former Mayor Henry A. Skeggs.

Ward meetings are to be held in the various wards of Albany tonight, for the purpose of nominating aldermen from the various wards. A general mass meeting will be held at the Albany city hall Friday night, at which time consideration will be given to nominating candidates for the offices of mayor, chief of police and president of the city council. So far as known there are no avowed candidates for the office of mayor in Albany. Politics of a municipal character will no doubt pick up after the mass meeting of Friday night, and from that time to the election in September there will be vigorous campaigning.

A mass meeting will be held at the Decatur city hall Friday, when Mr. Skeggs will speak.
